

Health Information Privacy Statement

Your privacy and confidentiality will be fully respected. This fact sheet sets out why we collect your information and how that information will be used.

Purpose

We collect your health information to provide a record of care. This helps you receive quality treatment and care when you need it.

We also collect your health information to help:

- keep you and others safe
- plan and fund health services
- carry out authorised research
- train healthcare professionals
- prepare and publish statistics
- improve government services.

By accepting health care services from us, you agree we can collect information about you from other agencies for the purpose of maintaining an up-to-date health record and providing safe and quality primary health care. This may include:

From other health providers and shared health records

- Receipt of laboratory, radiology or other results
- Accessing authorised national or regional health information systems [Could include region specific ESCR] to support your care by checking your medical history, laboratory or radiology results and current prescribing
- Receipt of correspondence from hospitals, emergency departments, after-hours providers, specialist services, allied health providers or other secondary and community care providers – including discharge summaries, outpatient or specialist letters
- Proactively contacting a hospital or specialist service to follow up on a referral or seek advice or an update on your care, where that contact results in information about you being shared with us
- Receipt of letters from screening programmes (such as bowel, breast or cervical screening), including results, or notifications regarding attendance or non-attendance

From non-health agencies and organisations

- Contact from or correspondence with Police, legal representatives, Oranga Tamariki, insurance companies, Ministry of Social Development (Work and Income New Zealand) and the Accident Compensation Corporation
- Receipt of correspondence from employers, regarding, for example, fitness to work
- Information from the New Zealand Police regarding firearms licences

Confidentiality and information sharing

Your privacy and the confidentiality of your information are really important to us.

Your health practitioner will record relevant information from your consultation in your notes.

Your health information will be shared with others involved in your healthcare, and with other agencies with your consent, or if authorised by law.

You don't have to share your health information, however, withholding it may affect the quality of care you receive. Talk to your health practitioner if you have any concerns.

You have the right to know where your information is kept, who has access rights, and, if the system has audit log capability, who has viewed or updated your information. Your information will be kept securely to prevent unauthorised access.

Information quality

We're required to keep your information accurate, up-to-date and relevant for your treatment and care.

Right to access and correct

- You have the right to access and correct your health information.
- You have the right to see and request a copy of your health information. You don't have to explain why you're requesting that information, but may be required to provide proof of your identity. If you request a second copy of that information within 12 months, you may have to pay an administration fee.
- You can ask for health information about you to be corrected. Practice staff should provide you with reasonable assistance. If your healthcare provider chooses not to change that information, you can have this noted on your file.
- Halswellhealth offers a patient portal which allows you to view some of your practice health records online. Please speak with the practice team should you wish to register for the portal.

Use of your health information

Below are some examples of how your health information is used.

- The Primary Health Organisation (PHO) and other contracted providers may use your information for clinical and administrative purposes, including obtaining subsidised funding for you.
- Te Whatu Ora / Health New Zealand uses your information to provide treatment and care, and to improve the quality of its services.
- A clinical audit may be conducted by a qualified health practitioner to review the quality of services provided to you. They may also view health records if the audit involves checking on health matters.
- When you choose to register for a health programme (eg immunisation or breast screening), relevant information may be shared with other health agencies involved in providing that health programme.
- The Ministry of Health uses your demographic information to assign a unique number to you on the National Health Index (NHI). This NHI number will help identify you when you use health services.
- The Ministry of Health uses health information to measure how well health services are delivered and to plan and fund future health services. Auditors may occasionally conduct financial audits of your health practitioner. The auditors may review your records and may contact you to check that you received those services.
- Notification of births and deaths to the Births, Deaths and Marriages register may be performed electronically to streamline a person's interactions with government.

Research

- Your health information may be used in research approved by an ethics committee or when identifying details have been removed.

- Research which may directly or indirectly identify you can only be published if the researcher has previously obtained your consent and the study has received ethics approval.
- Under the law, you are not required to give consent to the use of your health information if it's for unpublished research or statistical purposes, or if it's published in a way that doesn't identify you.

Complaints

If concerns are raised about the care or services we provide, we may disclose relevant health information to our regulators, insurers, indemnity providers, or legal advisers for the purpose of managing and responding to the concerns.

It's OK to complain if you're not happy with the way your health information is collected or used.

Talk to your healthcare provider in the first instance. If you are still unhappy with the response, you can call the Office of the Privacy Commissioner toll-free on 0800 803 909, as they can investigate this further.
